This joint effort by Nancy Silverton and Mark Peel contains a wonderful collection of creative recipes from the restaurant they formerly owned together--Campanile. Peel and Silverton offer the home cook detailed technique and illustrations, although the illustrations are not in color. This is not a simple recipe book as many recipes contain sub-recipes. However, for any cook desiring to cook an outstanding meal this is a wonderful book to have on your shelf. The book provides 7 stock recipes--veal, chicken, lamb, fish, vegetable, court bouillon, duck. There is also a recipe for pasta dough. A separate sauces section contains a wide variety. Although the vegetable recipes are probably the most simple to prepare, several are a variation on a standard theme. This is one book that doesn't stay on my shelf. Certainly this book is a much better effort than Silverton and Peel's prior collaboration.

While I have made only a couple recipes from this book, they were awesome. I have several more I can't wait to try.

The recipes in this book are really, really good and there isn't one that I wouldn't want to try. I have always been a big fan of Nancy Silverton's food and her versatility shines through in this volume. I'd recommend it to anyone who enjoys cooking and eating!

The Food Of Campanile is a well written, easy to follow recipe book filled with awesome dishes that you would expect only to be made by a seasoned chef. I would recommend this book to anyone and everyone who loves Italian cuisine. 5 Stars!!!!

Eating a meal at Campanile is a pleasure. The food is wonderful, better every time, rustic, aromatic, lusty and rich. The cookbook helps you recreate their food. The Gravlax recipe is my favorite. It is easy to prepare, very impressive, and has the silkiest texture.
