Stan Stojkovic (Ph.D., Michigan State University) is Professor of Criminal Justice and Dean in the Helen Bader School of Social Welfare at University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, where he has taught since 1983. His primary teaching responsibilities and interests are in the areas of corrections, public administration, philosophy, delinquency, and criminology. His major research interest is in the area of correctional administration. He has authored or co-authored several other textbooks in addition to CRIMINAL JUSTICE INSTITUTIONS: ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT, including an introductory text on corrections with Rick Lovell. He has been a presenter at professional conferences, and his essays and reviews have been published in such journals as Pace Law Review and Criminal Justice Policy Review; a forthcoming essay on prison administration will appear in the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF CRIMINOLOGY AND CRIMINAL JUSTICE. In addition, he has served as coordinator of the California Leadership Institute for the California Department of Corrections, and most recently as fiduciary agent for a High Intensity Drug Traffic Area Grant funded through the Office of National Drug Control Policy. David Kalinich (Ph.D., Michigan State University) joined the Florida Atlantic University (FAU) community in 2002 as Chair of the Criminology/Criminal Justice Department. Dr. Kalinich served on the criminal justice faculty at Michigan State University for 18 years, and as Criminal Justice Department Chair at Northern Michigan University for six years. He also served as the criminal justice graduate school coordinator at Grand Valley State University, Grand Rapids, Michigan, for three years before accepting the position at FAU. Prior to his academic career, he worked as an adult parole officer for a ten-year period for the State of Ohio. Dr. Kalinich has published a number of books and articles in the field and has an extensive background in planning and providing training programs to criminal justice professionals. John M. Klofas (Ph.D., SUNY Albany) is Professor of Criminal Justice, Chair of the Department of Criminal Justice, and Director at the Center for Public Safety Initiatives at Rochester Institute of Technology. Dr. Klofas has worked in adult and juvenile probation in Massachusetts and served as a caseworker in the state's maximum-security penitentiary and as Director of Classification for the Massachusetts Department of Corrections. An active member of several professional CJ organizations, he reviews for a variety of journals and consults with national agencies on crime research and policy. Dr. Klofas is a founding trustee of Metropolitan Forum, a citizens group interested in analyses and solutions to community problems. His research focuses on criminal justice management, crime policy, prison and jail issues (including crowding), and metropolitan patterns of crime and justice. In partnership with Don Pryor of the Center for Governmental Research, Dr. Klofas received support from the National Institute of Justice for a project involving working with the local criminal justice system in strategic research efforts to reduce community violence. A 2012 grant supports evaluation of New York State's CeaseFire Violence Prevention program.

This was a required textbook for a graduate-level course. The book is well-written and without any obvious errors - something I am noticing more and more of in textbooks. In this case, it starts with a history of criminal justice administration, then goes through some basic concepts that you will already know about if you have had any type of management class. The book then covers many management topics, such as motivation of personnel, job design, leadership, personnel evaluation, organizational conflict, decision making, and change and innovation. I see that some of the other reviewers have a negative view of this textbook. I agree, some of the material is monotonous, mundane, and repetitious. If you have any experience in management, then you will find the material remedial and boring. Overall, the book serves its purpose and for that I give it four stars.

The print was small I just did not like this book.

The worst CJ textbook ever assigned. Explains things so confusing that you aren't fully grasping the idea. Had better luck on google and other textbooks I own. Glad I only rented this sad piece of work.

Book overall is useful. The book itself was not damaged, however the edges of the cover were slightly, but for a used book it was great.

Poorly written text filled with distracting typographical errors and unengaging stylistics. Frequent incorrect answers on accompanying quizzes and exams.

It's a required book for a Master's class. I don't really care for it, it's rather dry and puts me to sleep.

great thank you for the fast service

Used this book for school. It was as expected.
